| Volltext                      | If you want to trade in animals, you need a permit from the competent authority in accordance with the Animal Welfare Act. This will only be granted if suitable premises are available for the species-appropriate keeping and care of the animals. In addition, the staff looking after the animals must be appropriately qualified. The commercial breeding of vertebrates, for example dogs and cats or reptiles, also requires such a permit. The expertise is checked on the basis of the qualifications demonstrated, for example via: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Suitable professional training</li> <li>• Certificates of competence from recognized institutions</li> <li>• several years of professional or part-time work with the animal species applied for</li> </ul> and, if necessary, through an expert discussion |
