Sachverhalt

- 60 percent of the lost net wage for employees without a child in the household
- 67 percent of the lost net wage for employees with at least one child in the household.

In addition to the seasonal short-time allowance, you can apply for additional benefits for your employees, such as the reimbursement of social security contributions.

You receive the seasonal short-time allowance from the first hour of absence.

As an employer, you initially pay wages and salaries to your employees in advance. The short-time working allowance is settled monthly in arrears with the Federal Employment Agency at the payroll office and paid to you retroactively.

Erforderliche Unterlagen

- Application for seasonal short-time allowance (S-Kug) and supplementary benefits
- Settlement list for seasonal short-time allowance (S-Kug) and supplementary benefits - attachment to the application for benefits

Voraussetzungen

The seasonal short-time allowance can be applied for in the event of temporary and unavoidable loss of working hours

- for economic reasons or
- for weather-related reasons or
- as a result of an unavoidable event.

Operational requirements:

- Your company belongs to the building trade, scaffolding trade, roofing trade or gardening and landscaping trade.
- Your company or company department employs at least 1 employee.

Verfahrensablauf

You can apply for seasonal short-time allowance in writing or online. However, you can also use KEA (Kurzarbeitergeld-Dokumente elektronisch annehmen) if necessary.

If you want to apply for seasonal short-time allowance in writing:

- You calculate monthly wage and salary payments as well as the seasonal short-time allowance.
- You pay the remuneration for hours worked and the seasonal short-time allowance for hours not worked to your employees and pay the social security contributions.
- You apply for reimbursement of the seasonal short-time allowance retroactively each month at the responsible employment agency (application for seasonal short-time allowance and payroll list).
- The employment agency checks your application and the payroll list. If your application is approved, you will receive the seasonal short-time allowance. You will receive a written notification.
- At the end of the seasonal short-time working period, the Employment Agency will check the statements you have submitted as part of a final audit and, if necessary, correct the approved seasonal short-time allowance.

If you want to apply for seasonal short-time allowance online:

- Go to the "eServices" portal on the Federal
