Teaser	If you are reduced in your earning capacity after an accident at work or due to an occupational disease, you will receive a pension from the statutory accident insurance.
Volltext	After an insured event, you are entitled to a pension from the statutory accident insurance under certain conditions. If the full labor market is closed to you, you will be granted a full pension. This amounts to two-thirds of your annual salary. If you have a reduction in earning capacity (MdE), you will receive a partial pension. This is calculated on a percentage basis and depends on: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • the degree of your incapacity for work • the amount of your annual salary <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The annual earned income is the total amount of remuneration and income from work in the 12 months prior to the month in which the insured event occurred. Insured events are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Occupational accidents, • commuting accidents (for example, on the way to work), • occupational diseases. You will receive a pension if:

Sachverhalt

- Your earning capacity is permanently reduced as a result of one or more insured events (MdE),
- the consequences of previous insured events worsen over time.

The MdE indicates the extent to which your working possibilities are restricted. Your entire working life is taken into account.

For young insured persons, the MdE is based on the effects that would result for adults with the same health impairment.

There are minimum and maximum limits for annual work earnings. For persons of full age, the minimum limit is 60 percent of the current reference figure. This is the average income of all insured persons under the statutory pension insurance scheme. The maximum limit for earnings is twice the reference amount in the year of the accident.

Erforderliche Unterlagen

If you are entitled to a pension from the statutory accident insurance as a result of an accident:

- The medical professional to whom you report your accident will automatically forward a medical report to the statutory accident insurance. You do not need to submit any further documents.

If the consequences of a past insured event have worsened in your case:

- You submit an informal application to your employers' liability insurance association or accident insurance fund. Your doctor will forward a current medical report to the responsible office.
- If necessary, you submit further evidence if this is required by your employers' liability insurance association or accident insurance fund.
