Teaser	If you wish to transfer or transport civil explosives to, through or out of Germany, you must first apply for a transfer permit from the Federal Institute for Materials Research and Testing (BAM).
Volltext	Would you like to transport civil explosives such as gunpowder, propellant powder or explosives? The transportation of these civil explosives is regulated by law in Germany and the European Union. If you want to transport civil explosives to, through or out of Germany, you need a permit in advance. You must apply for this so-called transfer permit. It can be applied for a single shipment or for multiple shipments within a period limited to 2 years. Transfer permits are issued by the respective national authorities in all European countries. In Germany, the Federal Institute for Materials Research and Testing (BAM) is responsible for the approval of cross-border transportation of civil explosives. In the application for a transfer license, you must specify who is transferring or transporting the
