Volltext	A stock corporation (AG) is a legal entity, i.e. a company with its own legal personality. Shareholders can be both legal and natural persons. As a legal person, it itself has rights and obligations. Even if the AG does not operate a business, it is one of the commercial companies, whereby the commercial law regulations of merchants (Commercial Code - HGB) apply to it. A Management Board consisting of at least one member (e.g. the sole shareholder) and a Supervisory Board with at least 3 members must be appointed. For the foundation, the articles of association, the articles of association, must be notarized. In addition, the AG must be registered by all founders and members of the Management Board and the Supervisory Board for entry in the commercial register of the competent court. Section 37 of the German Stock Corporation Act (AktG) contains special requirements regarding the content of the application. Only through entry in the commercial register does the AG become a legal entity. Since the AG is a corporation, it is entered in section B of the commercial register. Before the AG can be
