Voraussetzungen

Your data must be deleted if

- the storage is inadmissible,
- the storing body no longer needs your data to fulfill its tasks or
- personal data is stored in files if the storing body no longer needs the entire file to perform its tasks.

In certain files, for example

- the Federal Criminal Police Office,
- the state police,
- the Office for the Protection of the Constitution,
- the courts and the criminal prosecution authorities,
- in the population register
- and in the federal or central trade register
- in the driving aptitude register (previously: central traffic register)

Stored personal data must be

- after the occurrence of a certain event, such as after a criminal investigation has been discontinued, after acquittal in criminal proceedings, after moving to another municipality,
- or after the expiry of certain time limits be deleted. In many cases, the authority storing the data must check within precisely defined time limits whether it is still necessary to store the data. The exact procedure to be followed with the data and the deadlines to be observed are regulated by the respective authorities.

No deletion of data

Your data will not be deleted, but blocked if

- there is reason to assume that deleting your data would compromise your legitimate interests or
- the deletion of your data is only possible with disproportionate effort due to the special type of storage and
- if the deletion is prevented by statutory retention periods.

Kosten	The application is free of charge for you.
Verfahrensablauf	Submit a request for erasure to initiate the procedure. It can be submitted informally in writing, verbally, by telephone or electronically to the authority or company that holds your data. The data controller will then check whether the conditions for erasure are met. If this is (partially) the case, it will delete (part of) your data and inform you accordingly. Otherwise, it will (partially) reject the request. In the event of a (partial) rejection or from the outset, you can (also) contact the competent data protection supervisory authority. The recipients of transferred data must be notified of the deletion of your unlawfully stored data, unless notification proves impossible
