Teaser	State and local authorities responsible for emergency response can request support from the Federal Agency for Technical Relief (THW) as part of administrative assistance (administrative assistance request). Other authorities can request technical support from the THW.
Volltext	The Federal Agency for Technical Relief (THW) has technical equipment and expert emergency personnel for special emergency and damage situations. If personnel, technical or logistical support is required, the local and state authorities responsible for emergency response in particular can request technical support from the THW. This is usually done via the responsible control center. The THW is set up and organized uniformly throughout Germany. Contact persons are available at all levels. Operations are also conceivable in which the THW sets up its own command center (for example, if a separate operational section is transferred to the THW). If required, the THW will send professionally qualified advisory personnel to the staffs of the authorities responsible for emergency response and to the incident command. Such decisions are made depending on the specific operational situation and should not be anticipated in a service description.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	• usually no special documents
Voraussetzungen
Kosten	The THW may charge fees and/or expenses for THW missions in accordance with the applicable THW billing regulations (THWAbv). Note: Information on this can be obtained in advance
