- if there is a regional or supra-regional public interest in an employer's products or services or if there is a shortage of certain goods or services at the employer's location (regional interests). Supply or municipal policy reasons can also play a role here.
- where significant investments and/or a significant number of jobs are created or secured; if the establishment of a company is associated with a sustainable improvement in the sales or market opportunities of domestic companies or if it concerns the establishment of a production plant for technically high-quality (future-proof) and/or particularly environmentally friendly products (economic interests).
- if employment maintains or creates jobs (labour market policy interests).

The private, operational interest of an employer alone is not sufficient to establish a public interest in employment.

You do not have to prove qualifications. Recognition of their qualifications acquired abroad is also not required.

Before the residence permit is issued, the Federal Employment Agency must agree. This Federal Employment Agency also examines whether there is an interest in labour market policy. Consent is granted for a maximum of four years.

If the residence permit is issued, it is limited in time. The validity depends on your employment contract or the period of validity of the approval of the Federal Employment Agency.

Under certain circumstances, the Foreigners' Registration Office may oblige you to attend an integration course. This will then be noted on your residence permit.

If you are an employer and would like to hire an employee from abroad due to public interests, you can, on behalf of the foreigner, apply to the Foreigners'
