Teaser	You have obtained a title in court and would like to pursue enforcement from it. For this purpose, the competent court may, on application, issue an enforceable copy of the title.
Volltext	In order for you to be able to proceed for enforcement of a title (judgment, settlement, etc.), you need an enforceable copy of your title. This includes an enforcement clause. This clause certifies to you as a creditor that you may enforce the title against the debtor. The basic prerequisite for enforcement is that the title has an enforceable content (e.g. payment of a sum of money, surrender of a thing). The enforceable copy will be issued on application by the court from which you obtained the title. If the title has been declared provisionally enforceable by the court, the enforceable copy may be issued without further ado. If there is no provisional enforceability, the applicable time limit for appeal must be awaited before the enforceable copy is issued in order for the title to become final.
