Teaser	If you have any questions about infection control, you can contact the Public Health Service.
Volltext	The Public Health Service will provide you with general information on specific notifiable infectious diseases, such as: What should you do in the event of an infection or outbreak? What are the transmission paths? How great is the risk of infection? How can I protect myself and my family? As a supervisory authority, a municipal health department ensures public hygiene and the implementation of infection protection in its area of responsibility. As a lower health authority, it advises citizens and institutions on questions relating to infection hygiene and health issues. One of the sovereign tasks of the Public Health Service (ÖGD) is also the infection hygiene monitoring of medical facilities according to the Infection Protection Act. The responsible health authority carries out infection hygiene inspections in medical and public facilities and advises on hygiene deficiencies or local outbreaks of infectious diseases. The ÖGD advises the population on vaccinations, the prevention of communicable diseases and on all topics of drinking water and bathing water hygiene. The advice is free of charge for the citizen and is kept anonymous.
