Volltext	If you are temporarily unable to continue running your household due to an emergency situation – whether due to illness, imprisonment, recuperation measures or even after a death – and no other person in the household is able to do so, you can apply for help to continue the household from the social assistance institution responsible for you. You can receive the help if it is necessary and sensible to continue running the household, for example because you have children to look after. You can receive support for all activities that you are no longer able to cope with, at least partially, as part of your budget continuation. This includes housework as well as personal care for children and other family members living in the household. Household maintenance assistance is a social benefit based on your income and assets. It will only be provided if you do not receive the required benefit from others or from other social welfare institutions, such as benefits from the statutory health insurance fund, assistance with care or education. As a rule, the help for the continuation of the household is only intended to support you temporarily. You can therefore only apply for it for a transitional period. This restriction does not apply if the assistance makes it possible to avoid or postpone placement in an inpatient facility.
