broker these animals for a fee or consideration,
 • organize animal exchanges for the purpose of exchanging or selling animals by third parties.

You do not require a permit to keep farm animals.

Erforderliche Unterlagen

As a rule, the following documents must be submitted:

- Certificate of good conduct to assess reliability
- Proof of expertise includes: relevant training certificates, degree certificates, training certificates, proof of many years of experience in handling the respective animals.
- Plan of the rooms and facilities, floor plan (e.g. location sketch, description of the housing facilities, cages, terrariums, lighting)

Voraussetzungen

In order to obtain a permit, you must generally provide evidence of your expertise in handling the respective animals and your reliability. In addition, the permit and the conditions are tailored to the individual case. On-site appointments are usually carried out by the responsible veterinary office.

The application must generally contain the following information:

- planned activity
- Location of the business (business address)
- Owner of the business (name, address, date and place of birth)
- Proof of the reliability of the business owner
- Details of the person responsible for the activity, if they are not the same as the respective business owner (name, address, date and place of birth)

Modul

Sachverhalt

- Proof of the expertise and reliability of the person responsible
- the species and the respective numbers of animals to be kept
- Plan of the rooms and facilities, floor plan (e.g. location sketch, description of the housing facilities, cages, terrariums, lighting)

The person who has applied for a permit in accordance with Section 11 of the Animal Welfare Act must prove that they are competent.

The expertise required for the activity can generally be assumed if the person responsible

- has completed state-recognized or other training or further training that qualifies them to handle the animal species to which the activity relates, or
- has the specialist knowledge required for the activity due to their previous professional or other contact with animals, for example through many years of successful keeping of the animal species concerned.

Furthermore, the applicant must be reliable. The authority assumes that the person responsible for the activity to be carried out is reliable if this person is known to the authority and there are no facts that give rise to doubts about the reliability of this person with regard to animal welfare. As a rule, the authority will request a certificate of good conduct to verify the person's reliability.

Finally, the available premises are inspected by the authority in order to determine their suitability in connection with the species-appropriate keeping of the specified animal species and respective numbers of animals.

Modul

Sachverhalt

Based on the authority's inspection and the particularities of the individual case described above, permits in accordance with Section 11 of the Animal Welfare Act are also provided with additional conditions tailored to the individual case.

Kosten

Fee range for the decision on applications for the breeding and keeping of laboratory animals, trade in animals and other permits with relevance to animal welfare law in accordance with Section 11 (1) sentence 1 numbers 1 to 8 letters a to f, including the necessary site inspections and the holding of expert discussions on the knowledge and skills required to grant the permit: EUR 50 - 10,000

Verfahrensablauf

Ideally, the application should be submitted to the competent veterinary office together with all the necessary documents (see above). The necessary application forms can also be obtained there in advance.

If necessary documents are missing at the time of application, these can generally be submitted later. After the documents have been checked, an official veterinarian will usually carry out an on-site visit to inspect the premises that are to be used for the activity. A final decision is then made as to whether a permit can be granted.

Bearbeitungsdauer

Frist

In principle, there are no deadlines. A decision on the granting of a permit is only made once all the necessary information has been provided, documents submitted and the premises comply with animal welfare regulations. The decision can therefore be delayed if the applicant is given the opportunity to improve the application in one of these areas by setting a deadline. However, if, for example, there are obvious, serious and financially costly structural defects in the premises that are to be used for the activity, an application can also be rejected without a further deadline for rectification. The same applies if it is foreseeable that proof of expertise or reliability cannot be provided.
