Would you like to have your property surveyed because there are no more boundary stones or because the property boundary is unclear? You can find out more here.

Volltext

Would you like to know exactly where your property boundary is because you want to build a house or erect a fence? But the boundary stones have disappeared or you don't know whether the existing boundary markers are still in the correct position? Then you need to have either an official boundary notification or a boundary survey carried out. Both can be carried out for you by a publicly appointed surveyor based in North Rhine-Westphalia or by the land registry office of your district or city.

The two possible products - the official boundary notification and the boundary survey - differ in their informative value and price. Ask the surveying office for advice on which product is best suited to your case.

The simpler and cheaper product is the official boundary survey. With the official boundary survey, the surveying office uses the data in the real estate register to determine the desired boundary points of your property. These are then marked for you with stakes, for example. No further work is carried out on the boundary. In particular, no boundary markers are moved or missing boundary markers replaced.

The more informative, but also more expensive product is the boundary survey. With its help, a so-called determination of the border is possible. This means that the boundary is geometrically and legally fixed in the real estate register. This may still be necessary, particularly in the case of old boundaries. In addition, incorrectly positioned boundary markers can be moved to the correct position and missing ones can be repositioned.

Verfahrensablauf

You can have your property surveyed as follows:

- You apply for the survey of your property either to a publicly appointed surveyor based in North Rhine-Westphalia or to the land registry office of your independent city or district.
- You can submit the application for surveying as the owner of the property.
- First ask the surveying office for advice on whether an official boundary notification is sufficient or whether you need a boundary survey.
- For both the official boundary notification and the boundary survey, the amount of the fee depends on the number of boundary points concerned and the standard land value. In the case of a boundary survey, there is also a fee for recording the boundary report at the boundary appointment.
- The surveying office will arrange an appointment with you on which the survey will take place on site. However, you do not have to be present during the survey.

The further procedure differs depending on whether you have an official boundary notification or a boundary survey carried out.

Sachverhalt

In the case of an official boundary notification, the procedure is as follows:

- The affected boundary points are marked with wooden stakes, for example.
- If you wish, the surveying office will explain the results of the survey to you on site.
- As proof of the work, you will receive a sketch describing the course of the boundary.

In the case of a boundary survey, the process continues as follows:

- Once the surveying office has prepared all the documents following the survey, you and all other property owners affected by the survey will be invited to the boundary appointment. Affected property owners are, for example, the owners of neighboring properties in whose boundaries a new boundary marker has been placed.
- The boundary appointment takes place on site at the surveyed property.
- At the boundary appointment, the surveying office explains where the boundaries run and which boundary signs are used to mark them.
- All explanations are documented by the surveying office in the so-called boundary report. With your signature, you acknowledge the result of the survey.
- If someone does not come to the boundary appointment, they will receive a copy of the boundary report by post and can sign it later.
- The surveying office then hands over all documents to the relevant land registry office.
- The cadastral office then completes the survey in the real estate cadastre. The boundary is then geometrically and legally fixed.
- If the area of the property changes as a result of the survey, you will be notified.
- In addition to the surveying office, the cadastral office also charges fees for its work.
