Teaser	Would you like to operate your licensed restaurant business through a deputy? You will need a deputy permit for this. You can find out more here.
Volltext	If you wish to operate your licensed restaurant business through a deputy, you will need a deputy permit in addition to the permit for the restaurant business. You submit the application as the holder of the restaurant license. The deputy permit is issued for a specific deputy and can be limited in time. If you want to operate your restaurant business through several deputies, you need a separate deputy permit for each person who is to operate the business as a deputy. The proxy permit can be issued to both natural and legal persons. A proxy permit is only required for legal entities and associations without legal capacity if the person who is to operate the catering business is not authorized to represent or manage the business by law, articles of association or partnership agreement. Bodies of legal entities or associations without legal capacity do not require a proxy permit. The representative manages the business in your name and for your account. They act in your place as the holder of the restaurant license and are liable for any violations of the Restaurant Act. The deputy must have the necessary reliability and must also take part in a training course at a chamber of industry and commerce on the main features of the most important provisions of food law and have this training certified. The deputy permit expires as soon as the associated restaurant permit expires or if the deputy does not start working within one year of the permit being issued or has not worked as a deputy for one year.
