Teaser	Many things need to be considered when carrying out a funeral in a coffin. You can find an overview here.
Volltext	Burial in the ground means that the deceased person is buried in the ground in a cemetery. Some cemetery authorities also allow burial in a crypt or an above-ground burial building. The Saxony-Anhalt Burial Act does not provide for any exceptions to the coffin requirement for burials in the ground. If the religion of the deceased prohibits burial in a coffin, some cemetery operators have developed solutions to reconcile religious motives with the coffin requirement. There are different types of burial sites (elective grave, row grave, communal facilities). The respective cemetery operator decides what is on offer. An important difference between an elective grave and a row grave is that it is not possible to extend the right of use for a row grave and that row graves are generally cheaper. Also, only one person at a time can be buried in a row grave. Relatives who die at a later date may therefore not be buried in this row grave, but must be buried in another grave. The location and size of the grave, the resting period, the duration of the right of use, fees and other details (e.g. grave maintenance) are determined by the respective cemetery administration by statute (= cemetery regulations, cemetery fee statutes).
Erforderliche Unterlagen	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Death certificate or proof from the competent registry office that the notarization has been postponed. Please ask your appointed funeral director or the municipality or church in whose cemetery the burial is to take place which other documents and proofs are required.

Verfahrensablauf

Bearbeitungsdauer

Frist

As a rule, a burial may take place at the earliest 48 hours after the death. The burial should take place within 10 days of the death. The lower health authority (= district) may permit an earlier burial for religious reasons or order it for reasons of hygiene. It can also allow a later burial if there are no hygienic reasons to the contrary.
