Teaser	Dying people or their loved ones who need support can contact an outpatient hospice service. If outpatient care and support are not sufficient, care in an inpatient hospice is possible.
Volltext	Outpatient hospice services Dying people or their loved ones who need support can contact an outpatient hospice service. , In outpatient hospice work, volunteers of the hospice services accompany seriously ill and dying people and their relatives. Depending on your needs, they regularly come to your house for a few hours - also as a supplement to an outpatient care service. The staff of the hospice services also accompany you in elderly and care facilities, in facilities for the disabled and in the hospital. Outpatient hospice services are financed by subsidies from health insurance companies and donations. The accompaniment of those affected and their relatives is free of charge. Inpatient hospice services Under certain conditions, you can take advantage of an inpatient or semi-inpatient service in hospices. This includes palliative care and nursing care. Guest rooms are usually available for your relatives. 95 percent of the costs of care in hospices are covered by the respective health and care insurance. 5 percent of the costs are provided by donations. There is no own contribution.
