Teaser	Children over the age of 14 can revoke their adoption if the adoption has not yet been decided by a court. This revocation must be publicly certified.
Volltext	In principle, the child and the legal representatives (usually mother and father) must agree to an adoption. If the children are younger than 14 years old, only the legal representatives can agree (usually mother and father). If the child is older than 14, the child must also consent to the adoption. If a court has not yet ruled on the adoption, a child who is 14 or older can revoke the adoption. This is called a revocation of consent to the adoption. This revocation is also possible if the legal representative has consented to the adoption and the child has later turned 14. However, this is only possible if the adoption has not yet been finalized (i.e. no court has yet ruled on the adoption). The child can revoke the adoption on its own. It does not need permission to do so. Why the child wants to revoke the adoption does not matter. A form is required for the revocation. The revocation must be "publicly certified". The child can do this at a
