Teaser	If you want to market eggs from your laying hen farm, you may have to register it. Upon registration, your farm will be assigned an identification number.
Volltext	Since 01.01.2004, only eggs from a laying hen house for which a registration number (producer code) has been issued and which are marked with this corresponding producer code may be placed on the market (exception: direct marketing). The following are subject to registration • businesses that keep 350 or more laying hens or • businesses that keep fewer than 350 hens but market their eggs subject to mandatory labeling. If fewer than 350 hens are kept and the eggs are sold without labeling and unsorted directly to the end consumer on the farm or at the door (direct marketing), there is no obligation to register.
