Volltext

If you want to clear-cut an area of more than two hectares in your forest, you need a permit. If the area is a protection forest, this is already required for clear-cuts of 1,5 hectares or more.

Clear-cutting measures with an area of at least 1,5 hectares that completely remove the tree cover are clear-cutting. Clear-cutting also includes the felling of individual trees if this reduces the wood stock of a stand to less than 40 percent of its normal state and this measure also covers an area of at least 1,5 hectares.

Adjacent bare areas and unsecured regeneration are included in the area calculation.

It is not a clearcut if

- the area of the felling including adjacent areas is less than 1,5 hectares,
- Natural regeneration measures are associated with it,
- Forest stands are advanced or undercut, or
- it is a felling in a Christmas tree crop.

No permit is required if

- a clear-cut outside of protection forest has a total size of less than two hectares

or if the area is already

Sachverhalt

- a management plan or management report reviewed by the upper forestry authority is planned,
- a forest conversion permit has been granted, or
- destruction by natural events has already been determined by the forestry authority.

The forestry authority may only deny you permission if you have repeatedly or insufficiently fulfilled your obligations for reforestation in the past or if the careful treatment of the forest cannot be ensured by imposing conditions. Under certain circumstances, restrictions under other regulations, for example nature conservation law, must also be observed.

Extending the deadline for reforestation

There is a legal obligation to reforest cleared or heavily thinned areas within three years. If there are unreasonable reasons why this deadline cannot be met, you can apply for an extension in exceptional cases.
