Voraussetzungen	You will not automatically receive a new driving licence. After your driving licence has been revoked or surrendered, the driving licence office will carefully check whether you are physically, mentally and in character fit to drive a motor vehicle again. For this purpose, it can, for example, order a medical report or a medical-psychological examination (MPU). As a rule, the same regulations apply to the re-issuing of a driving licence as to the initial issuing of a driving licence. You only need a new driving licence test if you no longer have the knowledge and skills required to drive a motor vehicle.
Kosten	varies depending on the city or district If you apply for a certificate of good conduct, further costs will be incurred.
Verfahrensablauf	You can apply for a new licence in person at the driving licence office in your place of residence. (You can obtain the application form locally or, depending on the service, you can also download it or apply online.
Bearbeitungsdauer	The duration of the examination depends on the individual case.
Frist	You can submit the application at the earliest six months before the expiry of the court-ordered suspension period. If the competent authority has revoked your driving licence because you have eight or more points on the driving aptitude register you will receive a new driving licence at the earliest if the driving licence has been revoked for more than six months. If the competent authority has revoked your driving licence because you have not complied with an order to attend an advanced training seminar issued as part of the probationary driving licence, you will only receive a new driving licence after attending an

Hinweise

The judicial suspension period can be shortened if your driving licence has been revoked for driving under the influence of alcohol for the first time. If you are allowed to take part in a retraining course, you will receive an information sheet from the public prosecutor's office. This contains more detailed information on the conditions of participation and course organisers.

To take part in the course, you will need a "clearance certificate" from the driving licence office. You must not have committed any other traffic offences or criminal offences that call your suitability into question. If you have a blood alcohol level of 1.6 per mille or more, you must undergo a medical-psychological examination before starting the course. If you have a blood alcohol level of more than two per mille, you cannot take part in the course.
