You may only carry out activities as an entrepreneur in the guarding trade (e.g. in object or personal protection) with a permit. Guarding is defined as activities that are intended to protect the life, freedom, property or possessions of third parties from interference by third parties, for example:

- conventional bicycle, motor vehicle and building guarding
- Event service
- Air passenger control
- Carrying out transports of money and valuables
- Personal security
- Guarding of industrial and military facilities as well as nuclear power plants and other energy supply facilities

Note Special regulations apply to the activities of employees of a guarding contractor who are entrusted with the performance of guarding tasks (guarding personnel, guards); they do not need a permit, but must meet certain personal requirements. As a guarding contractor, they must register these persons with the competent body before they begin their activities
