Volltext	If you got married abroad and at least one of you has German citizenship, you can have the marriage subsequently certified in Germany. The date of the application is decisive for the possession of German citizenship. The marriage must have been validly concluded in the country in which you got married. German law must not stand in the way of the marriage. You can also have your marriage subsequently certified if you both do not have German citizenship and were married in Germany before an authorised person of a government of the state to which one of you belongs.

 You are entitled to apply:

- The spouses
- If both spouses are deceased, their parents and children

The registry office of your place of residence or the place where you last lived or the place of your habitual residence is responsible for the subsequent certification. If the registry office does not have jurisdiction, the registry office I in Berlin will notarise the marriage.

Erforderliche Unterlagen

- Foreign marriage certificate, if necessary with certification by the competent foreign authority (apostille) or legalisation by the German diplomatic mission abroad
- Valid identity card, passport or travel document
- Certified copies of the birth registers from the registry offices of the places of birth If the spouses were born in Germany
- Birth certificates certified by the competent foreign authority (apostille) or legalisation by the German diplomatic mission abroad If the spouses were born abroad
- Translations of all documents in a foreign language by sworn translators in Germany
- Certificate of naturalisation or certificate of citizenship, if applicable
- Proof of the establishment and dissolution of all civil partnerships Only required if one spouse has already established a registered civil partnership
- Notarised copy from the marriage register of the last previous marriage with annotation of dissolution Only required if one spouse has been married before.
 Alternatively or in the case of previous marriages abroad: Proof of the conclusion and dissolution of all previous marriages. For example, marriage certificates, death certificates, all divorce decrees - complete and with a note from the court stating when the judgement became legally binding ("final judgement").
