If you keep or want to keep a fighting dog, you need a permit to keep a fighting dog

Volltext

If you keep or want to keep a fighting dog, you need a permit to keep a fighting dog.

You do not need the permit if the fighting dog status of your dog is disproved.

In order to disprove the fighting dog status, you must present proof that you have passed a behavioural test.

In the behavioural test, your dog's basic obedience and behaviour in various situations are tested. In addition, the proper requirements for keeping the dog, for example leashes or muzzles, are assessed.

Decisive for passing the test is the behaviour of the dog.

Please note the following:

- If your dog passes the behavioural test, the certificate to be issued is limited to the statement that your dog is highly unlikely to be a fighting dog at the time of the test due to the behaviour shown in the test.
- If your dog is not older than 15 months at the time of the successfully passed behavioural test, a repeat test is required between the ages of 15 and 18 months.
- If your dog proves to be increasingly aggressive and dangerous at a later date despite having passed the behavioural test, then it is irrefutably considered to be a fighting dog.
- If your dog has already successfully passed a test in another country and the fighting dog status has been disproved by official findings, you can have your dog exempted from the behavioural test. For details and the requirements for exemption, contact the office
