Volltext	Homeless are people who have no fixed abode and no shelter. They spend the night in public spaces such as parks, gardens or subway stations. The essential task of homeless assistance is to help people in particularly difficult social situations, financial emergencies or housing issues. Comprehensive counseling, personal assistance, financial support and help in social institutions are provided. Homeless people are all those who do not have housing secured by a rental contract. They live, for example, in an emergency shelter, an inpatient facility of homeless assistance or stay overnight in a municipal facility. To prevent an acute threat of losing a home, for example, rent debts can be taken over, depending on the individual case. If the apartment has already been lost (acute homelessness), for example, a place in an emergency shelter can be granted first. The goal, however, is to help find a place to live. In individual cases, for example, the deposit, a security deposit or the broker's commission can be pre-financed. Financial aid is usually granted in the form of a loan.
