Volltext	If you want to use your deregistered vehicle on public roads again, you must first re-register it. This is a re-registration to the same owner if you are the person for whom the vehicle was previously registered as the owner. representative to do so or submit it online.

Internet-based re-registration can only be carried out for vehicles that have not been out of service for more than seven years at the time of your re-registration application.

If you apply for a different license plate, the registration authority will assign your vehicle a different combination of an identification number. In the internet-based registration procedure, the change of license plate number can be applied for electronically if, among other things, no changes have been made to the vehicle data compared to the data previously recorded or, in the case of initial registration, compared to the data on the certificate of conformity and no keeper-related exemption has been granted in relation to the vehicle.

The registration authority may inform the person registering the vehicle of the result of the vehicle tax arrears check. If you instruct a third party to register your vehicle, you must give your consent in writing for the registration authority to disclose your vehicle tax situation to the third party. In these cases, the registration of the vehicle is dependent on the submission of the declaration of consent.

If the vehicle data and the owner data have already been deleted from the Central Vehicle Register (this usually takes place after approx. seven years) and the certificate of conformity, the data confirmation or the certificate of individual vehicle approval for the unmodified vehicle cannot be provided in any other way, the registration authority may request the submission of an expert opinion from an officially recognized expert for motor vehicle traffic or a technical service designated in accordance with § 30 of the EC Vehicle Approval Regulation for the inspection of complete vehicles of the respective vehicle class. The expert opinion must contain the technical description of the vehicle to the extent required for issuing the registration certificate Part I and Part II. The expert opinion must be accompanied by an annex specifying the technical regulations on the basis of which the
