Teaser	Permission from the competent authority is required to shorten the beak tip of poultry.
Volltext	Permission from the competent authority is required to shorten the beak tip of poultry. This is granted at the request of the livestock owner. Permission may only be granted if it can be credibly demonstrated that the intervention is essential for the protection of the animals with regard to the intended use. Necessity is given if known factors that are (partly) responsible for feather pecking and cannibalism are excluded as far as possible, but the risk of this behavior occurring cannot be countered. Permission is granted on a case-by-case basis for a limited period of time and, in the case of chicks of laying hens under ten days old, contains provisions on the type, extent and timing of the procedure and the person carrying it out.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	The application must be submitted in writing to the competent veterinary and food inspection office of the district or city. The applicant must provide the competent authority with credible evidence of the indispensability of the intervention in the form of a veterinary certificate stating the measures taken by the future livestock owner to eliminate the known causes of feather pecking and cannibalism in livestock farming as far as possible. By way of derogation, the competent authority may require a written declaration from the future keeper stating that the animals are kept in accordance with its recognized requirements and that beak trimming is nevertheless essential. If the applicant is not the future livestock owner but, for
