Teaser	Severely disabled people who are significantly impaired in their mobility in road traffic are entitled to be transported free of charge on local public transport.
Volltext	Severely disabled people who are significantly impaired in their ability to move around in road traffic are entitled to free transportation on local public transport. This requires a supplementary sheet with a token. This applies to people with walking disabilities, people with exceptional walking disabilities, people who are helpless, deaf and blind people (G, aG, H, GI and BI marks on the severely disabled person's pass). The B mark also entitles the holder to free transportation for one accompanying person. Free transportation only applies to local transport. Local transport is public passenger transport, i.e. buses and streetcars within the meaning of the Passenger Transport Act, suburban trains and local rail services throughout Germany.
