Teaser	Does your child have problems in everyday life or in their development? Are you as a parent unable to help your child on your own? Then an educational advisor can support your child.
Volltext	A parenting support worker or care assistant can help a child or young person in everyday life, in dealing with their parents and with social problems. Possible forms of help are <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Talking about problems, fears and behavior • Help in coming to terms with stressful experiences • Support in solving problems with family, friends, teachers or other people • Support with visits to the authorities • There is further help for older young people: Support with finding work and accommodation • Help with separation from parents • Help with becoming independent Note: In contrast to "socio-educational family support", a parenting support worker concentrates their help largely on the child or young person in question. If possible, he involves the social environment. This is a type of educational support service. It can also apply to young adults.
