Energy cost advice from the Rhineland-Palatinate consumer advice centre

People with rather low incomes, who have high energy costs and payment worries, are helped by the consumer advice centre as part of the free energy cost advice. In a multi-stage consultation, the causes of the high energy consumption are investigated and solutions are found together.

The experts of the consumer advice centre

- check your accounts and contracts,
- try to prevent or remove an energy shut-off together with you and contact your supplier to do so,
- find out what savings opportunities you have in your home or if there are other ways to reduce your energy costs,
- think about what further steps could improve your situation in the long term,
- refer them to other counselling centres, e.g. if there is a risk of indebtedness.
