Volltext	The electronic residence permit (eAT) is issued and handed out as a separate document in credit card format with additional electronic functions. Inside the card, the eAT has a contactless chip on which biometric features (features: Photo and, after the age of 6, two fingerprints), ancillary provisions in connection with the residence permit (e.g. for gainful employment) and personal data are stored. The chip also contains electronic proof of identity and the option of using an electronic signature. The following residence permits are issued in the format of the electronic residence permit (eAT): <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Residence permit • Settlement permit • Permit for permanent residence-EG • Residence card for third-country national family members of a Union citizen or a national of an EEA state • Permanent residence card for third-country national family members of a Union citizen or a national of an EEA state • Residence permit for Swiss nationals and their third-country national family members if they opt for an eAT

Verfahrensablauf	The introduction of the electronic residence permit (eAT) has an impact on the entire process at the responsible office. In any case, a waiting period of four to six weeks is to be expected between application and delivery of the eAT, as the cards are produced exclusively by the Bundesdruckerei in Berlin. Due to the required storage of biometric data on the chip inside the card, two fingerprints will have to be taken of applicants (including children and young people aged 6 and over). For this reason, a personal visit is required in all cases when applying - even for existing authorizations. Longer processing and waiting times at the relevant office are to be expected. The previous residence permits, which were affixed to the travel documents as a label, will remain valid even after the introduction of the eAT, at the latest until 31.08.2021. The eAT will therefore only be issued before the expiry of the valid residence permit if there is a legitimate interest in reissuing it.
