Teaser	If you want to run training courses for dangerous goods safety advisors, you must be recognised as a training provider by the local Chamber of Commerce and Industry.
Volltext	This requires an application to the Chamber of Commerce and Industry responsible for your area. In your application, you must:

Modul

Sachverhalt

- indicate the area of recognition sought (road transport, inland waterway transport, rail transport, maritime transport);
- include a timetable for each part of the training course
- indicate the available instruction material, visual material;

As a training provider, you must have premises suitable for conducting the theoretical instruction units of the part-practical components as well as the necessary training material. In addition, your training instructors must possess appropriate field-related and teaching qualifications.

The responsible Chamber of Commerce and Industry is entitled to inspect your premises and the training material. The Chamber of Commerce and Industry can also contact the persons you have indicated as training instructors in order to arrange appointments for any additional assessment interviews that may be required.

If the requirements are met, official recognition will be notified by the locally responsible Chamber of Commerce and Industry. This notification will state the transport modes for which you are permitted to run training courses.
