persons in your company place plant protection products on the market, you must state the names and addresses of all these persons. In addition, you must enclose proof of expertise in the supply of plant protection products for all the competent persons named in the notification.

You must notify the competent authority immediately of any changes to the group of persons and any changes that affect the details of the business as well as the cessation of the business.

Plant protection products are intended to protect plant products and plants, in particular crops (such as arable farming, viticulture or fruit growing) against harmful organisms and other adverse effects. Plant protection products may only be used if their use is unlikely to adversely affect human and/or animal health or groundwater. Other significant harmful effects, especially on the ecosystem, must also be excluded. Plant protection products may only be used on outdoor land if they are used for agricultural, forestry or horticultural purposes. However, they shall not be used in or directly on surface and coastal waters.

Before commencing any commercial activity involving plant protection products, this must be notified to the authority responsible for the place of business and the place of activity. The obligation to notify exists before the start of the activity if plant protection products are to be placed on the market or imported for commercial purposes or in the context of other economic undertakings.

According to the Plant Protection Act (PflSchG), the use of plant protection products is only permitted to persons who have the necessary technical knowledge and skills and can guarantee that no avoidable harmful effects on nature, humans and animals occur as a result of the handling of plant protection products. Plant protection expertise must therefore be proven by persons who

- use plant protection products on an agricultural holding (including horticulture or forestry) or for the
