Teaser	If you have had your weapons rendered unusable or destroyed, you must report this within two weeks.
Volltext	If you have had your weapons rendered unusable, you must immediately report this to the relevant firearms authority. Weapons [HM1] or their essential parts are rendered permanently unusable if the firing ability or function cannot be restored with commonly used tools.

If, however,

  • the chamber has not been permanently modified in such a way that neither ammunition nor propellants can be loaded,
  • the closure has not been rendered permanently inoperable,
  • in grips or other essential weapon parts for handguns, handguns, the trigger mechanism has not been rendered permanently inoperable,
  • in the case of handguns, the barrel does not run its entire length, starting in the chamber,
  • a continuous longitudinal slit of at least 4 mm width up to the muzzle, or
  • at intervals of 3 cm each, but at least 3 calibre-sized bores, or
  • other equivalent running changes

  • in the case of long guns, the barrel in the third facing the chamber does not have at least 6 calibre-sized bores or other equivalent barrel modifications and is permanently closed in front of them in the direction of the barrel muzzle with a calibre-sized hardened steel pin, then the same provisions will continue to apply to these weapons as to functional weapons requiring a licence.

You must have the weapons rendered unusable by a gunsmith/gun manufacturer. They will then issue you with a deactivation certificate as proof. You must keep the deactivation certificate together with the weapons that have been rendered unusable or take it with you when transporting such weapons. If you lose the deactivation certificate, you must immediately report this to the competent weapons authority.

If you have notified the weapon and presented the
