Verfahrensablauf

Training to become a driving instructor can only take place in one of the approximately 56 recognised driving instructor training centres throughout Germany. Not only the theoretical training, but also an internship in a training driving school is required.

The training is a "step-by-step training". In the basic level, the driving instructor license of class BE is first acquired. This requires a two-phase application process. Based on this, the driving instructor licences of classes A, CE and DE can be acquired.

In order for the trainee driving instructor to be able to apply the knowledge freshly acquired in the officially recognised training centre in the training driving school, he shall be granted a candidate authorisation with limited training rights if he has previously successfully passed the practical driving test and the specialist examination in each case.
