Teaser	Independent youth welfare organizations
Volltext	Child and youth welfare services are largely provided by independent organizations. These include large organizations such as the German Red Cross, the Workers' Samaritan Federation, the Workers' Welfare Association, the Diakonisches Werk or Caritas, but also smaller associations. They are involved, for example, in child day care, youth work/youth social work or offer educational services outside the family. The local youth welfare offices cooperate with the independent providers as part of the overall planning responsibility of the youth welfare office and coordinate their services locally.
