- Certificate that you are authorized to work as a psychological psychotherapist or child and adolescent psychotherapist in your country of training
- Proof of your professional experience (e.g. certificates from employers)
- Proof of your other qualifications (e.g. further professional training, courses, seminars)
- Certificate of registration or proof that you wish to work in the federal state where you are submitting the application
- Written declaration stating whether you have already submitted an application for determination of equivalence and to which body. If available, also the notification received
- Proof of your German language skills
- Proof of your personal suitability: Official certificate of good conduct from a German authority. Another name for the official certificate of good conduct is "Führungszeugnis Belegart O".

In Germany, you can obtain the certificate of good conduct from your local residents' registration office or citizens' registration office. As a rule, the official certificate of good conduct should be a maximum of 3 months old when it is presented.

Also a certificate from an authority in your home country: for example, an extract from your criminal record

- a certificate of good standing
- a signed declaration that no criminal proceedings are pending against you and that you are not under investigation
- Proof of health suitability: A medical certificate or a medical certificate confirming your health. The certificate must not be more than 3 months old when you submit the application.

The LAVG will tell you which documents you need to submit in the original or as a copy.

You must submit your documents in German. This
