Verfahrensablauf

To have your qualification obtained abroad checked, you must submit an application. This should be sent to the relevant office. Which office is responsible for you depends on the following factors

- Your foreign qualification,
- Your place of residence or work,

The competent authority will compare the qualification you obtained abroad with the German reference qualification. If no significant differences are found in this comparison, you will be granted full equivalence.

"Regulated" means that you require recognition of your professional qualifications in order to practice the profession or use the professional title.

In professions for which you do not necessarily require recognition (non-regulated), you will receive a notification in which the differences identified are described in detail. You can use this to apply directly to employers or choose an individually suitable further training course.

The recognition procedure ends with either a positive or a negative decision.

There is no provision for partial recognition.

Bearbeitungsdauer

The processing time for a recognition procedure under the BVFG depends on the individual case.

To do this, you must submit an application to the relevant competent authority.
