Teaser	You can have the equivalence of a foreign, non-academic professional training in the field of administration of justice determined with a German comparable profession (e.g. paralegal or notary's assistant).
Volltext	Access to numerous training occupations in the field of law (such as paralegal or notary's assistant) is not regulated in Germany. Admission to the profession is therefore not dependent on an applicant having the equivalence of foreign vocational training with a comparable profession in Germany established. However, recognition of equivalence enables a graduate of foreign training to present their own qualifications transparently on the domestic labor market. In the case of recognition of equivalence, persons with foreign qualifications have the same rights and obligations as graduates of domestic qualifications.

In addition, there must be no significant differences between the proven professional qualification and the corresponding domestic professional qualification.
Kosten	The competent authority will inform you of the amount of the costs charged for determining the equivalence of the training. The costs can be paid by bank transfer (also via online banking).
Verfahrensablauf	The equivalence of a foreign professional qualification is determined upon application. This must be submitted to the bar association or notary's office responsible for the respective domestic professional training and otherwise to the Bavarian State Ministry of Justice.
