Teaser	For many countries outside the European Union, you need an international driving license.
Volltext	Within the European Union, you are generally allowed to drive with your German driver's license. For many other countries, however, you will need an international driving license in addition to your national driving license. There are two types of international driving license: • International driving license according to the Convention on Road Traffic of November 8, 1968 (so-called. Vienna Convention on Road Traffic, see Section 25b (3) in conjunction with Annex 8d of the Driving License Ordinance [FeV]). Period of validity: 3 years, unless a national driving license category is valid for a shorter period. • International driving license according to the International Convention on Motor Traffic of April 24, 1926 (so-called Paris Convention on Motor Traffic, see § 25b paragraph 2 in conjunction with Annex 8c FeV). Period of validity: 1 year, unless a national driving license category is valid for a shorter period.

Sachverhalt

These are generally (only) valid in the contracting states of the respective agreement. It is therefore advisable to ask the tour operator or the diplomatic representation of the country in question about the need for an international driving license or to clarify which type is required. Please note that an International Driving Permit can only be issued if you are the holder of a German driving license and are in possession of an EU driving license (issued from 01.01.1999). Holders of a German driving license issued before 01.01.1999 must exchange the German driving license for the EU card driving license when an international driving license is issued.
