person entitled to subsidiary protection or if a ban on deportation has been established in accordance with Section 60 (5) or (7) AufenthG must also notify the responsible immigration authority of any trips to their home country.

The residence permit forms the basis for a permanent right of residence - despite initially being limited in time - unless an extension is excluded from the outset, e.g. in the case of temporary residence purposes.

The extension of the residence permit must be applied for at the Foreigners' Registration Office, just like the granting of a residence permit.

Erforderliche Unterlagen

• The documents to be submitted may vary considerably.

Please enquire at your local immigration office. As a rule, however, the following documents are required:

- valid passport
- current biometric photograph (frontal view)
- Proof of secure means of subsistence
- Proof of sufficient living space
- Proof of health insurance cover
- Proof of purpose of residence, e.g. employer's certificate or employment contract, marriage certificate
- Further documents if necessary

Voraussetzungen

The requirements for obtaining a residence permit vary depending on the purpose of residence.

In general, the granting of a residence permit usually requires that

- the person's livelihood is secured,
- the identity and, if the foreigner is not entitled to return to another country, the nationality of the foreigner has been clarified,
- there are no grounds for deportation,
- if there is no entitlement to the issue of a residence title, the foreigner's stay does not impair or jeopardize the interests of the Federal Republic of Germany for
