Teaser	Anyone who wants to transport goods commercially in Germany with motor vehicles over 3.5 tons needs a permit. For cross-border transport, a so-called community license is required for motor vehicles over 2.5 tons.
Volltext	Road haulage is the commercial or paid transportation of goods with motor vehicles that have a permissible total weight of more than 3.5 tons, including trailers. Commercial road haulage generally requires a permit. The so-called "Werkverkehr", i.e. road haulage for a company's own purposes, does not require a permit. Contract haulage does not require a permit if <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • the transported goods are the property of the company or have been sold, purchased, leased, rented, manufactured, produced, extracted, processed or repaired by the company,

- the transportation serves the delivery of the goods to the company, their dispatch from the company, their transfer within the company or for personal use outside the company,
- the motor vehicles used for the transportation are driven by the company's own staff or by staff made available to the company under a contractual obligation, and
- the transportation is only an ancillary activity in the context of the company's overall activity.

If the goods are only transported in Germany , you require a permit for vehicles over 3.5 tons (in accordance with Section 3 of the Road Haulage Act). The permit for national commercial road haulage can be issued for a limited period, subject to conditions or with conditions. The permit can be issued for a period of validity of up to 10 years.

However, if you want to transport goods across borders with motor vehicles over 2.5 tons, you need a so-called Community license. For cross-border journeys with motor vehicles over 2.5 tons within the European Union, the European Economic Area (EEA) and Switzerland, a Community license is required (EU license) and, if applicable, a driver's certificate for nationals of a third country.

For commercial road haulage with countries outside the European Economic Area, you require bilateral permits or so-called CEMT permits in addition to the national permit for the German part of the route (permit for commercial road haulage or Community license) for parts of the route in third countries.

If you are driving into or through Switzerland as part of commercial road haulage, you need a valid Community license.
