abroad.

- Other methods and sources of information may also be used by the recognition body (e.g. research in the country of training).
- If the documents are not sufficient, further information or documents may be requested from the applicant.
- A determination will be made as to whether there are significant differences between the individual degree and the qualifying studies in Bavaria. The existence of other special requirements for the granting of state recognition will also be examined. Proven professional experience and other qualifications will be taken into account.

Completion of the procedure

After receipt of the complete documents and the advance payment, the recognition body must decide on the application within three months by means of a decision.

The following outcomes are possible:

- If no significant differences are found and all other special requirements are met: State recognition is granted and a corresponding certificate is issued.
- There are no significant differences, but the special requirements for state recognition have not yet been met:
State recognition is not yet granted. After successful completion of the adaptation period, state recognition will be granted and a corresponding certificate issued.

- There are significant differences and the special requirements for state recognition are not met: State recognition is not yet granted. A legally binding decision is issued stating which compensatory measures can be used to compensate for significant differences or deficits. You will be offered a corresponding adaptation period. After successful completion of the adaptation course, state recognition will be granted and a corresponding certificate issued.

- If the course of study completed abroad does not qualify the applicant for comparable activities as a qualifying course of study in the Free State of Bavaria, the application will be rejected.
- If the applicant does not fulfill his or her obligation to cooperate and the facts of the case cannot be clarified as a result, the application will be rejected.

Compensatory measures

- If there are significant differences between the foreign degree course completed and the corresponding degree course regulated by state law in Bavaria, compensatory measures are necessary.

- You are entitled to advice on which teaching institutions offer the relevant compensation measures.
- After completing the adaptation course, you can submit a follow-up application for state recognition by submitting the certificates of achievement you have acquired.

Translations

Translations must be carried out by interpreters or translators who are publicly appointed or sworn. They do not have to be publicly appointed or sworn in Germany; a translation by an interpreter or translator who is publicly appointed or sworn in abroad is sufficient. A database of sworn or publicly appointed translators and interpreters in Germany can be found under "Related links" - "Interpreter and translator bank".

Notarizations

A certification confirms that the copy corresponds to the original. Certifications can be obtained from the authority that issued the original document. In addition, the authorities of the Free State of Bavaria, the municipalities and associations of municipalities and other legal entities under public law subject to the supervision of the Free State of Bavaria as well as notaries are authorized to certify copies or issue certified copies. In order to save costs, not every single page has to be certified; documents can also be certified in summarized form.

Note for employers

The obligation of the respective employing organization to check the professional and personal suitability of applicants for an assigned position remains unaffected by state recognition.

This applies in particular to the examination of reliability within the meaning of Art. 1 Para. 1 No. 2 or Art. 2 Para. 1 No. 2 of the Bavarian Social and Childhood Educators Act.
