Teaser	If you want to navigate the Alster with motorized vehicles, you need a permit. Here you can find out where and how to apply for one.
Volltext	The navigable Alster area is a special use area that is intended for water sports and recreation. Shipping is therefore mainly reserved for boats for sailing, rowing and paddling. You need a separate driving license to use engines as propulsion. You must apply for the separate driving license from the responsible authority. The driving license will only be issued to you in justified exceptional cases. Even with the separate driving license, you are not allowed to drive in certain areas of the navigable Alster area. This is only permitted with a further, additional special permit. You must also apply for this special permit from the responsible authority. The areas in which you need a special permit are marked on the map of the navigable waters in the Alster area (see the "Links" section).

Vehicles powered by an oil/gasoline fuel mixture with underwater exhaust are prohibited as of January 1, 2007. These restrictions do not apply to public service vehicles or emergency operations by private rescue services.
