Teaser	If you have a driving license from another country in the EU or EEA and live in Germany, you must have your driving license converted into a German document under certain conditions.
Volltext	If you hold a driver's license from another country in the European Union (EU) or the European Economic Area (EEA, including Iceland, Liechtenstein, and Norway) and live in Germany, you do not necessarily need to convert your license to a German one. Your license is generally valid in Germany. You only need to exchange your driving license when it is due to be renewed. In particular, converting class C and D driving licenses may be necessary, as these are only valid for a limited period in Germany. In this case, the German validity period applies, even if your foreign driving license has no expiration date or a longer expiration date. Therefore, inquire well in advance of your entry into the Federal Republic of Germany whether and when you need to convert your driving license. Further information on the validity of driving licenses can be found under "Links."
Erforderliche Unterlagen	valid identity card, electronic residence permit (eAT) or passport with current registration confirmation valid foreign driving license biometric passport photo (35x45 millimeters) Proof of previous residence for at least 6 months in an EU or EEA country (e.g. employer certificates, rental agreement) If applicable, a certificate of clearance from the issuing authority (required if the foreign driving license has expired before entering Germany) Appointment confirmation Additionally for driving licenses of classes C and D:

Hinweise

The LBV-Mitte and LBV-Nord driving license offices are responsible for issuing driving licenses. You can find information about exchanging your driver's license in other languages on the website of the Federal Ministry for Digital Affairs and Transport (BMDV). Further information can be found in the "Links" section. If you originally held a driver's license from a third country outside the EU and exchanged it without taking a test in another EU country (not Germany), please make an appointment with the LBV immediately after moving to Germany. If this applies to you, you will find the code number 70 and the country code of the third country on line 12 of your driver's license. You are not permitted to drive any vehicles in Germany with this license. You must first take a theoretical and practical driving test and exchange your driver's license for a German one.

Kurztext

EU and EEA driving licenses are generally still valid in Germany. A re-description is not mandatory. The re-registration only needs to be carried out when the driving license or certain driving license classes are due to be renewed. For C and D classes, the German validity period applies, even if no or longer periods are entered on the foreign driving license. Therefore, a re-registration may be necessary in this case in particular.
