Volltext	If you want to restrict public traffic space or use it for special purposes, you need a permit. This applies, for example, to road construction work, but also to setting up scaffolding, storing building materials or holding events. Before you start work, you must apply to the responsible authority for a traffic order (permission to restrict traffic). A traffic order is not only required if the road is closed, but also if the work affects cycle paths or footpaths. As part of the process, the responsible authority determines which barriers and signs you may need to set up and how traffic is to be regulated or diverted.
