Handlungsgrundlage	Laying Hen Business Register Act Directive 2002/4/EC on the registration of laying hen farms
Teaser	If you intend to start a business for keeping laying hens, you must notify the responsible authority in advance. You will then receive an identification number for your company.
Volltext	If you intend to start a business to keep laying hens, you must notify the responsible authorities in advance. Once the report has been made, the responsible authority will provide you with an identification number for your business. You need the identification number because only eggs from registered laying hen houses may be placed on the market. The identification number must be printed on the eggs intended for marketing from the respective laying hen farm.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	Informal, written notification Documents on the type and scope of the operation (see also: Notes)
Voraussetzungen	Are subject to registration Farms that keep 350 or more laying hens or Farms that keep fewer than 350 hens but market their eggs subject to labeling. Only businesses that keep fewer than 350 laying hens and only sell their eggs directly to the end consumer from the farm or through door-to-door sales are exempt from the registration requirement. All producers, even if they keep fewer than 350 laying hens, who market their eggs on the weekly market must mark the eggs with the producer code and are therefore subject to registration. Registration can only take place if the minimum conditions and requirements of the EU Animal Protection Directive are met. The strict requirements of the Animal Welfare and Farm Animal Husbandry Ordinance must also be met.

Kosten

Gebühr: Es fallen keine Kosten an

Verfahrensablauf

You notify the responsible authority in writing that you are starting a business to keep laying hens and attach the necessary documents. The responsible authority will examine your complaint. If necessary, the responsible authority may request information or documents from you. After a positive check, the responsible authority will assign your company an identification number. You will receive the identification number in writing.

Bearbeitungsdauer

No

Frist

No. However, since the marketing of eggs may only begin after an identification number has been issued, early notification is recommended.
