Teaser	If you want to import vertebrates from third countries for use as laboratory animals, you will need an import permit from the competent authority.
Volltext	If you wish to import vertebrates other than horses, cattle, pigs, sheep, goats, chickens, pigeons, turkeys, ducks, geese and fish (except zebrafish) from third countries for use as laboratory animals, you require authorisation from the competent authority. This applies to the use of animals in animal testing the killing of vertebrates solely for the purpose of using their organs or tissues for scientific purposes. Authorisation shall be granted if it is proven that the animals in question have been bred for one of the purposes mentioned. Otherwise, the permit can only be granted if bred animals with the characteristics required for the respective purpose are not available or the respective purpose requires the use of animals that have not been bred. Other import regulations remain unaffected.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	Import permit application form. Evidence that the animals were bred specifically for the purpose.
Voraussetzungen	As a rule, the facility or business must have animal welfare officers and other persons who are obliged to pay particular attention to the protection of the animals. The animals must have been bred for this purpose. By way of derogation, approval may only be
