| Teaser                        | If you want to engage in communal cultivation and distribution of cannabis within cultivation associations, you need a permit.   |
| Volltext                      | Under certain conditions, you have the option of growing and distributing cannabis. Individuals are only allowed to do this to a very limited extent. Alternatively, you can join a cultivation association. These associations are allowed to grow cannabis and distribute it to their members if they have received prior approval from the relevant authority. If you are a representative member of a cultivation association, you can apply for a permit to cultivate and distribute cannabis collectively. This permit is necessary if your association wants to cultivate cannabis for its members' personal consumption and distribute it to its members. The permit applies exclusively to the cultivation association (members, board) and the areas specified in the application. The permit is necessary to ensure that the cultivation and distribution of cannabis takes place within the legal framework. |
