Sachverhalt

Disabled within the meaning of Section 2 (1) sentence 1 of Social Code IX are people whose physical function, mental ability or mental health is expected to deviate from the typical condition for their age for more than six months and whose participation in society is therefore impaired. People are threatened by a disability if the impairment is to be expected (Section 2 (1) of the Social Code IX).

It is also a prerequisite that the impairment is a substantial disability that significantly impairs integration into society.

Verfahrensablauf

Beneficiaries are advised and supported by the social welfare office, also in the presence of a trusted person if desired. The counseling includes in particular the personal situation of the beneficiary, the strengthening of self-help for participation in life in the community, the benefits including access to the benefit system, the administrative procedures, references to service providers and other counseling services.

Support is provided, among other things, in making applications, clarifying responsibilities, fulfilling obligations to cooperate and claiming benefits.

In order to receive integration assistance, an application must be submitted to the social welfare office. The benefit is dependent on income and assets, whereby a contribution from income is only to be made if an income limit is exceeded. For individual integration assistance services (e.g. curative education services, participation in working life or participation in education), a contribution is not required. The applicant and, in the case of minors, the parents living in the household must raise funds from their assets

	before claiming benefits, whereby asset exemption limits also apply here. Within the framework of an overall plan procedure, applicants are involved in all steps of the procedure. The beneficiary's wishes regarding the goal and type of services are documented. The individual needs are determined by the health office. With the consent of the beneficiary, an overall plan conference is held in which the beneficiary, the Social Welfare Office, the Health Office and the service providers involved discuss the results of the needs assessment. After the conclusion of the overall plan conference, the social welfare office determines the benefits and issues a decision on the approved benefits.
