Teaser	Do you have a guardian from the Office of Social Services to clarify maintenance and/or paternity issues? You no longer need the guardian and would like to terminate the guardianship? Here you can find out how to do this.
Volltext	The parent who has applied for guardianship can terminate it at any time. A written declaration to the youth welfare office is sufficient for this. You can also terminate the guardianship only partially. In this case, write down the purpose for which you want to keep the guardianship for your child. The guardianship ends automatically if the legal requirements are no longer met. This is the case, for example, if: • both parents have assumed joint custody and the child lives in the joint household, • the child has reached the age of majority • the single parent and the child move abroad (residence abroad), • the guardianship has fulfilled its purpose, for example paternity has been established.

Hinweise	The Youth Welfare Office also does the following: • The Youth Welfare Office advises and assists you in asserting maintenance claims. • The Youth Welfare Office notarizes: Paternity acknowledgments and consents, maintenance claims, declarations of custody for joint custody and maternity acknowledgments. • The Youth Welfare Office issues certificates for unmarried mothers that there is no entry in the custody register and that she as the mother therefore has sole custody. This is the so-called negative certificate.
